BORDEN'S NAVAL BILL
An Act to Authorize Measures for Increasing the Effective Naval Forces of the Empire.

"His Majesty by and with the consent of the Senate and House of Commons of Canada enacts as follows:

Clause A in Borden's resolution

referred to by Sir Wilfrid Laurier
in his amendment follows:—

"1. From and out of the consolidated revenue fund of Canada
there may be paid and applied a sum not exceeding $35,000,000
for the purpose of immediately increasing the effective naval
forces of the empire.

"2. Said sum shall be used and applied under the direction of the governor-in-council in the construction and equipment of battleships or armoured cruisers of the most modern and powerful type.

"3. The said ships, when constructed and equipped, shall be placed by the governor-in-council at the disposal of His Majesty for the common defence of the empire.

"4. The said sum shall be paid,
used and applied, and the said
ships shall be constructed and placed at the disposal of His Majesty, subject to such terms, conditions and arrangements as may be agreed upon between the governor-in-council of His Majesty's government.

GRAVE CONSTITUTIONAL ISSUES AFFECTED.

The issues of the A. and G. W.
deat, which involves Premier Sifton's confiscation of some seven million dollars in connection with the Great Waterways case, are more far-reaching than the Premier ever dreamed of, and the result of his action may end vastly different to what he or his government ever bargained for.
So serious has the constitutional rights been interfered with by the Premier's action, that the chancellor remarked, after hearing the arguments, that their lordships would take time to consider their decision. It would seem by this as though Premier Sifton, although previously himself a judicator, never considered what constitutional rights he was trampling under foot, if he did, he certainly ignored, and there is just a possibility that the Province may have to suffer by his act. The decision is hanging in the balance, and their lordships' finding is awaited with great interest, as it also involves a serious point in the claims of the province to certain powers, which Mr. Buckmaster, who is arguing the case before
the privy council for the province, sets up, viz., that Alberta was an independent and sovereign state
as far as the right to make law was concerned. Its powers were those of an empire subject to two limitations only, viz., its geographical area and its obligation to do nothing hostile to the rights of other provinces. The bank's liability was a debt which the Province thought fit to pass the act regulating that debt. It was a decision which was not ultra vires, and could not be attacked as such. According to the lord chancellor's opinion, however, he questions this and is much concerned as to the effects the action of the province has on civil rights.
This is where the province is likely to fall down.

If girls would choose husbands
as carefully as they do their clothes
there would be fewer divorces and more old bachelors in the world.

LAURIER'S AMENDMENT

The Laurier Amendment to

Borden's naval bill is as follows:

"That all the words after the word 'that' be struck out and the following be substituted therefor:
'This house declines to concur in the said resolutions and orders that the same be referred back to the committee with instructions to amend the same in the following particulars, namely: to strike out all the words after clause and substitute therefor the following:

"The memorandum prepared by the board of admiralty on the general naval situation of the empire and communicated to this house by the Right Honorable,
the prime minister, on December fifth, shows that several of the most important of the foreign powers have adopted a definite policy of rapidly increasing their naval strength.

"That this condition has compelled the United Kingdom to concentrate its naval forces in home waters involving the withdrawal of ships from the outlying portions of the empire.

"That such withdrawal renders it necessary that Canada, without further delay, should enter actively upon a permanent policy of naval defense.

"That any measure of Canadian aid to imperial naval defense which does not embody a permanent policy of participation by ships owned, manned and maintained by

Canada and contemplating construction as soon as possible in Canada, is not an adequate or satisfactory expression of the aspirations of the Canadian people in regard to naval science and is not an assumption by Canada of her fair share in the maintenance of the naval strength of the empire.

"This house regrets to learn of the intention of the government to indefinitely postpone the carrying out by Canada of a permanent naval policy.

"It is the opinion of this house that measures should be taken at the present session to give effect actively and speedily to the permanent policy embodied in the naval service act of 1910, passed pursuant to the resolution unanimously approved by this house in March 1909.

"This house is further of the opinion that to increase in power and mobility the imperial navy, by the addition by Canada under the above act of two fleet units to be stationed on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts of Canada respectively

rather than by a contribution of money or ships, is a policy best calculated to afford relief to the United Kingdom and to relieve the burden of imperial naval defense

and in the words of the admiralty memorandum, to 'restore greater freedom to the movements of the British squadrons in every sea and directly promote the security of dominions,' and that the government of Canada should take such steps as shall lead to the accomplishment of this purpose as speedily as possible."

For the first time in the past four years there is to be an open season for beaver in Alberta, and commencing Dec. 15th, hunters and trappers north will be given an opportunity to secure specimens of the now comparatively rare fur-bearing animal of the province.

THE HUSTLER, CAYLEY, ALBERTA.

Ananias and the Armada

He Almost Saw a Part of It.

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

Captain Barnabas Fish knocked his pipe against the piano railing and proceeded to refill it with leisurely enjoyment.

"Let me see," he mused, "when did we leave off?" Just as if he did not remember.

"You sold the fleet of war vessels you put in mind of the time you almost lost the Spanish Armada. I remember the name somewhat accurately."

He chuckled softly. "Well, as I was saying, it happened when Ananias Blime in this one too?"

"Of course," returned the captain, with dignity. "What did Miss Telman say?"

"Excuse me, Captain Fish, but he is remiss in his Spanish Armada knowledge. I informed him so myself."

"But they are interesting, now, eh?" He puffed his pipe at me, while his blue eyes twinkled merrily.

"Ananias stepped right in. 'Very well, milian,' he went on, waving his pipe back to a corner of his bald mouth and speaking between his teeth. 'I am old, but I am young.' It happened when Ananias Blime in his first mate of the Hispaniola and I was born."

"I suppose he could make a chiasmus where I come up again," I suggested.

"Yes, sir; I was thinking of that."

"How about Ananias? What would he take long to breath if he had his heart stopped by my mesh?" I asked.

"It's noble to die for a great cause," he replied dreamily.

"I suppose he could go down your way, Ananias? It's your idea, and I'm only fair that you—"

"His pipe was suddenly snatched away from me by the captain. 'I offered that honor to you, Captain Fish,' he said merrily.

"Have you figured on the depth, Ananias? You are a good boy, and consider the consequences properly."

"I am thinking," Ananias replied, "that if you were very near the treasure ship all you'd have to do is hold him off with me. When, then, I could get the bottom of the cask and still protected by the staves and top walk over the wrecks and bring up a few pieces of gold. We might even get some of the stockholders of the company."

"Of course, he would make a sailor, with the rest of us, if I minded. But when you got it up to the surface you might find that a shark or a devilish man had off with me. Where, then, does he stand?"

"Ananias never flickered an eyelash. "The boy in the box must have the boy in the box must have the boy in the box," he said calmly, and after that I was silent."

"Ananias stood there watching me, as though as much astir unless I made a movement toward him and then almost imperceptibly moving out of my reach. After awhile I conjectured a reason."

"Your idea is an excellent one, I said as he took his coat off. "But you've got to be taken to the best position to make the experiment."

"If the boy holds out, about 5 o'clock this afternoon."

"Of course, we would have to have a boy and an anchor," I suggested to gain time.

"In that case you better go below and get the water built up. The carpenter will have some strong boards from the outside. Get out all the spare lines above and set all hands to splicing. It's a long trip down to Davy Jones' locker," I added.

"Yes, sir," he said, not making a move to go. "I'll come up with you and if I never return you will take command of the India, Ananias."

"Yes, sir, and you'll not forget the gold pieces?" he asked anxiously.

"Ananias! And just then I managed to catch the eye of two of his hands who were peering from the forecastle hatch and I was struck frantic."

"You might go forward and see about that water built, Ananias. I said as I took my coat off. "I'll be back in a minute."

"I'll think it over," he said with a sudden swirl, and, turning, he walked straight into the arms of my men.

"Well, the grub he came in, and when he saw Ananias abeam by that barrel he just pulled out his knife and cut him open, and then he stuck to that several years, having all kinds of adventures until I come along."

"I told you all this before, Miss Telman, when I related the adventures of Ananias. You wanted to know what he did."

"As if I could forget," I retorted.

"Of course you have all I'm telling you to tell. That's what I wanted to tell you, Captain Fish," I answered.

"Well, we had bound round from Cawtca with a cargo of jungle and dried fruit, except that Ananias had the greatest idea, which we were slipping through the Mediterranean sea, so he sold all afterwards. He did not pull a good one, though, because he sold the oil of Gibraltar, and never hearing the oil. Then he came off where I was taking a snooze."

"I think that's what he says," I said.

"I suppose you're bound to tell of the Spanish Armada and how some of that richly laden fleet of treasure ships were sunk off the shores here in 1588, and he died of the cold, drowning most of what I had. I don't know if my stock in treasure ships, had had my fill when I was a young man, even then."

"Will you tell me about your treasure hunt some day, captain?" I interrupted hastily.

"Of course, I will," he answered heartily, although I warn you, Miss Telman, it isn't as interesting as this one. When Ananias Blime had stopped talking, I had him lie down on the armchair, and I then learned respectfully white he said he had a great idea, which was that we should get up a port light in the sides and put 500 pounds of anchor chains in the bottom. When it was his scheme for me to get to the bottom, he said, "I'll be there."

All hands would rig a line on it and have me lie aboard, and down, down, down, I would have to swim, and when I got to the bottom, I'd sight three great old treasure ships down in the sand of the ocean bed.

"I'll tell you all about it when I see Ananias Blime in this one too?"

"Of course," returned the captain, with dignity. "What did Miss Telman say?"

"Excuse me, Captain Fish, but he is remiss in his Spanish Armada knowledge. I informed him so myself."

"But they are interesting, now, eh?" He puffed his pipe at me, while his blue eyes twinkled merrily.

THE CORNERS OF OUR WORLD.

A Distant Doctor That Showed the General Grief.

What we all feel, we say, when we are upon them sudden.

Leading down a pleasant way,

And the folks we used to know!

Remembering our country's ways.

WASHINGTON'S HUMOR.

A Distant Doctor That Showed the General Grief.

What is the general opinion to the contrary, Washington was not an especially grave and austere man. He had a sense of humor, as well as any one. From Professor C. F. Holiday's "Wit and Humor of古今人" I have taken this extract:

"He was fond of a jester, and the jester was a fool.

"He was fond of a fool, and the fool was a jester.

A Labor of Love

Twenty Years Have Seen Thousands of Those Stricken by Tuberculosis Return to Health.

It is twenty years now since a young cleric, who had been sent to see what was happening, had written his mother one day, and announced that he was leaving the firm's employ.

"Why, what's the matter?"

"My lungs, sir, I have to go to Colorado, the doctor says." And to him, the doctor said, "I don't know how many young men might tell it, and as hundreds of young men have told it—with varying degrees of truth, and with death staring them in the face. Tuberculosis has set its hand upon him."

The charges were, the founders say, few and small, the world has taken all it could afford to charge a man.

Free Hospital Started.

He founded the well-known erected the first building of the Muskoka Hospital, and it marked a step such as few in the world have taken at the time of its opening.

The enlistment of the late H. G. Hammon, the well-known actor, as a trustee and a eloquent spokesman for the man himself. He was passing the time of a winning trial, a long grand tour, when a doctor was present told him of the work.

"I gave up my position, gathered up my money and went away."

The episode was common enough, but its scenes brought it home to him thinking. This young man was able to take the step which would save his life, but what about those who were not? They died and that was all there was to it.

It was a matter of days, however, before the man still in is some parts—that the conclusion was decided. The business man, who had been a member of the Bismarck he had known, who was the sole survivor of a family of four, found that his wife, his son, his wife was apalling, and then and there he accepted his life work. He set himself to the task of curing the condition of the victims of the white plague.

Triumph Over Apathy.

That was the beginning of the movement in Canada and its annual ex-

Story of the Fight that Big-Hearted Men Are Waging Against the Deadliest Foe of the White Man.

against which he had fought so long, and a martyr to his life work.

The same man, a simple but half charitable basis at six dollars a month, a simple plan, now covers up a blank wall.

The charges were, the founders say, few and small, the world has taken all it could afford to charge a man.

Who Declares She Was Father Pissou Then Came the Opera.

"The happiest girl in all the world!" That is the distinction claimed by Miss Jack May, a blithe little girl from the wilds of Canada. Not many years ago Miss May, who is the daughter of a Canadian lumberman in the British navy, was a frilly, frothy schoolgirl to whom the theatre halls and card rooms repaid her all that was worth living for. When the boy she loved died, and with scores of other aristocratic young English girls, she went to the front as a soldier, and became a member of the famous band of the British Red Cross.

ROMANCE OF MINING.

British Columbia's Annals. Make a Fascinating Story.

Some idea of the extent of the mining operations in British Columbia can be gathered from the well-entitled results of mining operations made available to the public.

The mining of gold in British Columbia was at that time, especially the mining of gold, and the official statistics of the government show that with that year. The total production for a year up to and including the year 1910, amounted to a sum of $397,666,722. Of this sum $32,023,888, or $32,715,139 per, $65,315,040; the remainder being mineral, silver, copper, and metals such as mica, stones, and metals.

Between 1859 and 1861 the production by years has not been tabulated, but since 1860 the total production has increased to a point where it is still held the record of $20,377,000. Last year the output was three times that amount.

Large due to a falling off in the output of coal, owing to certain difficulties.

Last year the output of the three precious metals—gold, silver and copper—was $15,161,000, but copper was a close second.

And some say that mining has only commenced in British Columbia.

And the present operations, output and profits, are small in comparison with those of former years, but the mines are more fully developed, when other known deposits are worked, and when new ones are discovered.

And some say that it is not the future to look, but to the past.

And some say that the miners did not come to British Columbia and gold mining commenced.

F. W. BERGMANN IS NEW CHIEF OF G.T.P.'S HOTELS.

Manager of the Chateau Laurier Is Appointed to an Important Post That Will Make Him a Figure of Interest From Coast to Coast—Has Had a Wide Experience Both in England and The States.

F. W. Bergmann, who has just been appointed head and general manager of the Grand Trunk hotel system of Canada, which has been in the Chateau since its opening, is one of the most experienced men in the hotel industry both in the world. He has been connected with the management of some of the most famous hotels in the old country and in America, and has had full charge of the outfitting of the Chateau Laurier and managed it during the short period he has been in charge with admirable skill and ability. The present promotion shows that the directors and proprietors of the Canadian railroads appreciate his good work.

The company has several large hotels at various points throughout the continent so that they will have a magnificent system when it is completed and control of these hotels will fall to Mr. Bergmann.

Before going to Ottawa he was in charge of the celebrated Bath Hotel at St. John's, Newfoundland, and for a time also at the Mountain Stephen House at Field, B.C. Previously he had been manager of the Victoria Hotel, Oregon, and at the Del Monte Hotel, Castle Craig, California. He has also been manager of the Mount Royal Hill Hotel, New York, and had charge of the Clarendon Hotel, Newport, R.I., besides having extensive experience in the management of some of the leading London houses, such as the Savoy and the Royal Argentine. He has had a hotel experience extending over 30 years and has been a host of workmen, a superb administrator, a man of great presence, industry and ability, combined with a genial and kindly manner, which made him very much liked by the traveling public.

She Drew the Line.

It is a very well-known fact that Queen Victoria was, to say the least, somewhat strait-laced, and possessed some rather narrow ideas of propriety and dignity. A story which Sir Frederick Wimborne tells in his recent book on "The Queen" is typical of her characteristics:

One day, during a hunting tour, her intrepid hostess, Lady Southampton, who, by reason of age, long-prepared devotedness, and reciprocated friendliness, had become a close confidante, addressed Her Majesty as follows:

"Do you not think, ma'am, one of the satisfactions of the future state will be not only our reunion with those we love, but the opportunity to face to face so many of the noble figures of the past?—the Queen, for instance, in capital in the world—namely, 500,000 persons per week."

"The Queen, I am told, will be there, ma'am, Isaac too, and Jacob, and the wives and sons of Israel like. And the wives of King David—he too, yes, ma'am, King David?"

And after a moment's silence, with great dignity and silence, the great Queen made answer, "I will not need David."

The "Spanish" Name.

Lawson Graver tells how the representative of Spain at the court of St. James dined with his family on one occasion, and how the Queen asked him if there were any records in the art of misplacing the letter "i." Flinging

NAMES FOR WARSHIPS.

How the Admiralty Selects Cognomen For Big Fighting Machines.

R. L. Stevenson's "Treasure Island" has been resurrected and popularized in its own way by "Robinson Crusoe" sets, as every boy knows through boy paperbacks. The names to be taken from the works of Sir Walter Scott and Shakespear. Florida, Hispania, Ontario, Rosario, and Vicks are some of the names which have been chosen for the new fighting ships.

This is another modern innovation, as the Admiralty's Fleet Review of the Admiralty in choosing literary names for warships is not entirely unique. In 1865, when the British fleet was at sea, there were some revenue vessels called Rob Roy and the Lady of the Lake. In 1867, when the American Civil War was on, two Shakespeare names were used, such as Imogene and Orlando. These were the only two names which the like in the way of reading, at any rate, when they finished the story at one sitting.

The statistics of French insurance companies prove beyond question that women live longer than men; now is the time to insure in health, before the matter of a few months, or even years. The difference is one of almost a third. Women die on the average 10 years earlier than men, and for death for women insured on the books of one company is seventy, and for men it is 60. This company has special plans for women, all we meet, on its books. This company has the largest number of renewals and making one law for the man and another for the woman.

PANAMA CANAL

Latest Marvel of Engineering
The construction of the Panama Canal across the Isthmus of Central America—the total length of the canal being about thirty-five miles
and cost $40,000,000.

For nearly 400 years the joining of the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans by means of a canal had been the dream of engineers and navies. The suggestion that such a canal could be built was first made in the sixteenth century.

During surveys were made by such countries as England, America, with a view to cutting a canal, but nothing was done to carry out any plan until Frédéric de Lesseps, the man who constructed the Suez Canal in Paris in 1873, proposed a plan for cutting through the Isthmus of Panama. De Lesseps' plan was adopted, money was raised, and two years later a commencement was made.

At first De Lesseps' Engineering Company went to Panama to estimate the cost of the work, which they found to be $200,000,000, but the great engineering firm of Parsons, Brinckerhoff, and Quisenberry, who were engaged to make the estimate, found that the cost would be $100,000,000.

The history of De Lesseps' trade falls into two distinct periods. The first went on until 1889, and little progress seemed to be made. More than half of the $100,000,000 had been expended in endeavoring to carry out the project as originally planned.

The crash came, and some holders of shares in France had lost all their money. The management, bribery of public and financial journals in France, and the invasion of the country by the French army, which damaged
the credit of many countries,
brought the Republic to its foundations.

Nothing was done to save the country, and the French company
then sold the canal to the United States
for $50,000,000.

Then came another difference, which is connected with Costa Rica, and which brought the Republic to its foundations.

FRANCE is Europe's banker. For a country so poor at position, their people must be remarkably shrewd. The people of France are exceptionally thrifty. They have a saving instinct which has been handed down from their ancestors. No matter how small their means, they always set aside a sum for future need. In old age they enjoy the fruits of their savings.

The practice of a savings account is the best way to secure that habit of saving without which no ability even can insure you against possible misfortune.

La Gripe is gripping some of our citizens at the present time. Several have felt the effects of its depressing shake.

Those going away for Christmas or for the new year, or any having visitors during the holidays let us know about it, please.

Municipal affairs are quiet at present. A calm before the storm. Several names are mentioned, but as yet all are scared to say a word.

The C. P. R. are advertising their Christmas and New Year rates over their lines at a single fare and a third for the double journey.

We have made arrangements with The Grain Growers' Guide, the only paper in Canada owned and published by the organized farmers, to supply it and the Cayley Hustler for $1.50 per year in advance.

More and more of the merchants throughout the province are eliminating the credit business and adopting a straight cash or a cash or note system. The movement is in the interests of the country and the results of the innovation will be carefully noted.

The bazaar held last Saturday by the ladies' aid of the Methodist church was well attended and the goods offered for sale went off like hot cakes. The goods offered were of a suitable character and excellent quality and just the things needed at this time of the year, and at right price. Between $100 and $200 was realized.

Mr. George left on Sunday for Ontario. While there he expects to load some thoroughbred hogs and cattle for Cayley.

Saturday will be the shortest day of the year.

Chester Beagle left last week for Victoria, B.C.

How's wedding bells and a handsome wife for a Christmas present?

Mrs. Cotey and children or Calgary were Cayley visitors over Sunday.

Mr. George left on Sunday for Ontario. While there he expects to load some thoroughbred hogs and cattle for Cayley.

At the election of officers on Wednesday evening last, for the Methodist Sunday school, the following appointments were made: J. W. Bradley, sup't.; Miss Scollie, secretary; M. S. Newton, treasurer; Miss Egashlesham, teacher for primary class; Mrs. Crawford, intermediate girls; Mr. Newson, intermediate boys. The teacher for the bible class was left open.

With the exception of a few cold hours during some nights and early morning, Old Sol still has the upper hand on the weather man, and is giving sunny Southern Alberta summer weather. In Ontario they are having alternate rain, snow storms and blizzards and a few other trifles. In Slavey people are walking around in their shirt sleeves. Oh, you sunny Southern Alberta!

Commenting on the large amount of American pork imported by the province, W. F. Stevens points out that in Alberta there is a margin of 3¢ to 4¢ per lb. clear profit in swine breeding. An ordinary farmer can raise the progeny of about three brood sows on feeds that would otherwise be largely wasted, and these pigs need not represent a cost to him of more than 3¢ a lb. live weight.

With more than that number, a little more skill in feed and more marketable grain would have to be used, but even then the man who cannot raise hogs at 5¢ a lb. with his feed costing him 90¢ a hundred, does not, according to Mr. Stevens, know his business.

Watch for this Chap
Macleod Advertiser: Manager Allan of the Bank of Commerce has received word from Moose Jaw, that a cheeque artist is working in this direction. He represents himself as a farmer, and his scheme is to open an account at one or more of the banks and get cheques for small amounts certified. He then raises the cheques and gets them cashed at stores. He cleaned up quite a bunch at Regina, and will probably reach Macleod soon. He gets in his work on Saturdays, after banking hours.

Alberta Is the Best

Speaking of the breeding of dairy cattle at one of the meetings of the Alberta Mixed Farming Special, Mr. S. G. Carlisle of Chesterfield, Ont., remarked that we have only to compare Denmark with Russia, or Holland with Spain, to see how dairying can raise small countries to the highest degree of agricultural prosperity. Albert affords the best market in Canada, if not the whole continent, for dairy products: prices of milk, butter and cheese are higher than perhaps any other place in North America and this despite the fact that feed is cheaper. The importance of stock-raising to the soil can be illustrated by the fact that selling a ton of wheat brings in about $3.3 and robs the soil of its fertility, whereas selling a ton of dairy produce brings in at present prices about $40, and increases fertility. The great thing, he says, is to get the right kind of country, and the right kind of food; the two latter Alberta already possesses, and the shortage of the first is being remedied by the big importations in progress of the best pure-bred stock, and there is no reason why Alberta should not raise the champion animals of the world.

Dairy Business Never More Hopeful

The passing summer of 1912 has been marked by the erection of an unusual number of new creameries in the three prairie provinces, and on all hands the word is that the dairy business was never more promising. This is a hopeful sign. In many ways the upbuilding of the dairy business is the promise of continued solid progress. It is quite true that dairy farming is no get-rich-quick scheme; it means steady, unceasing toil seven days in the week, and the profits are not quite so spectacular as are those sometimes realized by farmers who grow grain only. But there is an assurance about dairy farming that is not enjoyed by most other forms of agriculture, and it is really wonderful to hear the unanimity with which business men state that the credit of solid dairy districts is better than that of sections where dairying is unknown.
